

Advisory Board

Prof. Emanuela Struffolino

Emanuela Struffolino is Assistant Professor of Economic Sociology at the University of Milan. Her research interests include life-course sociology, gender inequalities in the labor market, social stratification, and methods for longitudinal data. She is a member of the Executive Board of the Sequence Analysis Association, Associate Editor of the Journal of Family Research and Deputy Editor of Demography. Her work was published – among others – in Sociological Methods and Research, Sociological Methodology, Social Science and Research, Advances in Life Course Research, Research in Social Stratification and Mobility. Together with Marcel Raab, she is the author of the book “Sequence Analysis” (Sage, 2022).